Situated on the outskirts of El Escobar and close to the popular town of Fuente Alamo, the property is approached down a small camino (country road), enter the grounds through electric gates with intercom system and there the villa sits in a commanding position with the mountains in the distance. Entry to the villa is up a few steps with pillars either side and a seating area, the large front door with glass surround gives an indication to the quality that can be expected inside. From the hallway is an exceptionally impressive lounge with Roman pillars and a dining area just off to the left in the turret part of the room. There are spotlights in the ceiling reflecting down onto the porcelain floors, which incidentally are throughout the villa. All the bedrooms are very large. Two have ensuite bathrooms with the added bonus of a dressing area with ample storage and wardrobe space. The third bedroom is presently being used as a twin and has access to the family bathroom. All the bathrooms are finished in granite, again with luxury fixtures and fittings and the bedrooms all have double glass doors leading out either into the garden or the covered terrace which extends the full length ...
